Norwich Park is owned and operated by BHP Mitsubishi Alliance (BMA), a joint venture between BHP and Mitsubishi Development Pty Ltd. Norwich Park is a hard, coking coal open cut mine located 25 kilometres south-east of Dysart and 256 kilometres south-west of Mackay in the Bowen Basin. In 2012, production ceased and the site was placed into care and maintenance.

BMA has undertaken a broad scope of restorative works to rehabilitate the land both during the course of its mining activities and after they had ceased, from re-shaping the landscape, ripping, ameliorating, spreading topsoil and seeding to encourage revegetation to make the land suitable for its agreed post mining land use. Some of this rehabilitated land is now being used for grazing by neighbouring landholders.

On 7 February 2019, 294 hectares of rehabilitated land was certified by the Queensland Government. This achievement adds to BMA’s portfolio in leading environmental practices, including attaining certification for 1,176 hectares of rehabilitated land at its former Gregory Crinum site (now owned by Sojitz Corporation).
